North Hempstead Day

Relive Our Town History at a Live-Action Performance September 23, 2010, Mary Jane Davies Park

On September 23, 1775, a group of patriots living in the northern section of what was then the Town of Hempstead gathered at Cow Neck (Port Washington) and Madna's Neck (Great Neck) to declare their allegiance to the revolutionary cause.

At the time, the Town of Hempstead stretched from the Long Island Sound to the Atlantic Ocean. Politically, it was divided. The northern part of the Town predominantly supported the revolution while the southern tier was loyal to England.

Having proclaimed their allegiance to the revolution, the northerners sent their declaration to the Provincial Congress seeking to become a separate township. Action was delayed by the British occupation; ultimately, however, the New York State Legislature acted on the matter, and in 1784 the northern portion of the Town was officially named the Town of North Hempstead.

In celebration of our Town, Supervisor Jon Kaiman and other North Hempstead elected officials will take hundreds of students on a fun-filled journey through 235 years of Town history -- from colonial times through the present. The students will learn how a local law is passed, participate in historic games and gain an appreciation of the important role our Town played in the history of our nation!
